Jen's Heartbreak

The big message here is that Jennifer Garner is truly a class act. Her confidence and self-worth come from within. On top of that, she is a wonderful role model to girls and women. Maybe Ben just figured out she was too good for him.

Genevieve via people.com

I have long admired Jennifer Garner. My thoughts and good wishes are with her as she faces this heartbreak. I have no doubt she will emerge stronger and better for having gone through such a difficult time. Hang tough, Jen. You are one great mama.

A Son's Legacy

It's been nearly five years since Rutgers University freshman Tyler Clementi (inset), 18, leaped to his death off the George Washington Bridge in New York City after being cyberbullied by his roommate for being gay. Now his parents have started the Tyler Clementi Foundation (tylerclementi.org) to protect other LGBT kids. On Aug. 17 the foundation will launch the #Day1 campaign in schools across the country, requiring an authority figure to outline bullying policies to students and get verbal confirmation that they're understood. "We want to prevent bullying before it happens," says Joe Clementi, Tyler's father. On a personal note, their son James wed his boyfriend Ramon in February. "It was so sad that our family was not all present," says mom Jane. "It was also very beautiful that James and Ramon were so happy and so in love."

FOCUSING ON THEIR KIDS

BY JEFF NELSON

Rossdale and Stefani (in Los Angeles in 2013) are known to bring their kids to and from school. Says the source: They're "both great parents."

SINCE THEY ANNOUNCED their 13-year marriage is ending, Gwen Stefani and Gavin Rossdale have put up a strong and united front for their three sons. "It's obvious that they are trying to keep things as normal as possible for their boys," a source tells People. Indeed, the rock-star parents—who released a joint statement on Aug. 3 that they have split after 20 years together—have spent much of the past week at their Beverly Hills mansion (inset) with Kingston, 9, Zuma, 7, and Apollo, 18 months. "On the outside, their family life seems pretty normal," says the source. "It doesn't seem their separation has affected their day-to-day life. For Gwen and Gavin, their boys always → came first.” For Stefani, 45, and Rossdale, 49, who have agreed to joint custody of their children, that mentality has always been paramount. For a while, says a Rossdale source, the couple “were trying to make it work for the kids,” but despite the shared love and respect, their marriage struggled, and they “have been leading separate lives.” For the No Doubt rocker, that means returning to work on The Voice. Adds a Stefani source: “Her top priority is making sure her kids feel comforted during the process.”

TODRICK HALL

After being eliminated from American Idol, Todrick Hall, 30, thought his “life was over.” But now the YouTube star (he’s signed by Justin Bieber’s manager Scooter Braun) stars in MTV’s docuseries Todrick (Aug. 31, 10 p.m.): “I feared lightning wouldn’t strike twice, but now I feel like the luckiest guy in the world.”

CIRCLE OF FRIENDS & ROMANCES

Angst is so 2010. Taylor Swift’s squad of successful gal pals has more important priorities than worrying about antiquated girl code. “We even have girls in our group who have dated the same people,” Swift recently told Vanity Fair. “It’s almost like the sisterhood has such a higher place on the list of priorities for us.” Case in point: the recent couplings between Joe Jonas

(a Swift ex) and Gigi Hadid and Kendall Jenner and Nick Jonas (who once dated Selena Gomez). The latter duo was set up by the former, according to a source, who adds, “[Nick and Kendall] have been texting,” but “it’s too soon to say how serious things could get.” Whether it’s going to be for forever or go down in flames, they’ll clearly all stay friends!

AS NAPOLEON SOLO—THE DEBONAIR, Cold War-era thief turned secret agent in The Man From U.N.C.L.E., director Guy Ritchie's remake of the '60s spy series—Henry Cavill delves into the world of international intrigue. While his onscreen counterpart dodges bullets and bombs with flair, in real life the 32-year-old English actor isn't ready to give up his day job. "It's very tough to say what kind of spy I would be," he admits. "There are many different kinds, and I don't know if I fit the bill for any of them, to be honest." What is he well-suited for? Reprising his role as the Man of Steel in the 2016 film Batman v Superman: Dawn of Justice. While he and Ben Affleck (who plays Batman) face off onscreen, Cavill says, "I had to try quite hard not to laugh in between takes because Ben is really funny. It's good to be around that kind of thing on long jobs."

Despite his superhero physique, Cavill reveals that growing up he was teased for being overweight. "I don't hold grudges," he says. "People had it far worse than me. But it was hard because I was a kid." He calls the attention he gets as a leading man "flattering," but adds that he keeps it in perspective: "The only person I want to think that is the person who I'm planning on sharing the rest of my life with. That's the only person who really matters." —K.C. BAKER

CATCHING UP WITH LUKE BRYAN

THE SINGER, 39, TALKS ABOUT HIS SEXY NEW ALBUM, HOW HE'S MATURED AND WHY IT HURTS HIS HEART WHEN COUPLES SPLIT

Your new album Kill the Lights includes the very sexy "Strip It Down." Did your wife serve as the inspiration for it?

Yes, Caroline is definitely an inspiration behind the song—it's just sexy to be thinking about her when I'm writing. This song feels like new territory for me. It's fun putting songs out you know people are going to be slow dancing or falling in love to.

You also have a duet with Little Big Town's Karen Fairchild on "Home Alone Tonight." What was that like?

I've been wanting to do a duet for some time. I was just thanking my lucky stars Karen signed on! The song has this sultry feel, and that's what Karen's voice is.

You've been selling out shows all summer. Is life on the road one big party for you?

I've matured. I get off the stage and have a beer or two and then I get into bed to do another two-hour show the next day. My thing is, I do what I need to do to do my job at the best level. My fans deserve that. That's where my head is at these days.

Next summer you turn the big 4-0!

I wish I could be 30, but there's no way around it, so you try to eat as good as you can and understand you're going to be a little more sore after shows. Caroline says growing old is a privilege, so you gotta understand it like that.

With news of Blake and Miranda and other high-profile couples splitting lately, does it make you stop and think about your own marriage?

Any time we hear of couples in the public eye breaking up, me and Caroline talk about it. It really hurts our hearts that people arrive at that and can't work it out. Yeah, you do think about it in this business. Caroline and I just say our prayers that we're happy and that things are good.

The former First Lady laces up her hiking boots to promote national parks

My mother was my Girl Scout leader and that started her lifelong interest in nature, which is the great legacy she left me. Now my childhood girlfriends and I hike a national park every year. One of the nice things about being all women is that we turn everything—pouring rain, wild horses—into a funny story and there are no tense moments like there might be if George was the one trying to put up the tent. These trips have given me great respect for how beautiful our country's natural landscapes are. Now that the National Park Service has its 100th birthday coming up in August 2016, First Lady Michelle Obama and I are cochairs of the celebration and want everyone to find their closest national park and start important family traditions off in the wilderness.

given a simple, blunt wrenching—a twist of a doll's head—and transformed into outrageously funny monsters. The group's mother figure, club owner Leona (Dannah Phirman), helpfully explains the art of lap dance: "A bounce and a bounce and a bounce and a look!" And Casey Wilson, as vulgar slob Jenfer, tells us, "I wrote the book on being awesome. I just can't read it." (Begins streaming Aug. 18)

EDITED BY KIM HUBBARD

Blaine Lour Born on the Bayou

The book centers on his dad, "Puffer," a successful oilman until the boom times go bust. Before then, young Blaine has plenty of good ol' fun, drinking beer at 10 and hanging in Mexico with his dad and a prostitute. Thoroughly engrossing.

Jennifer Weiner Who Do You Love

Weiner's latest is a summer heart-warmer.

Vanessa Diffenbaugh We Never Asked for Wings

THE SETTING

The couple created an intimate backyard wedding with lounge areas amid tables and poufs.

When Jennifer Aniston and Justin Theroux woke up as newlyweds on Aug. 6, it was clear the honeymoon had already begun. “They seemed ecstatic,” a source close to the actress tells People. “They celebrated late and barely slept, but they were in the best mood. They were giddy to have pulled off an amazing wedding celebration with their friends. And they were proud to finally be married.”

Yes, they finally did it! After a three-year engagement that kept fans and even friends guessing about when, where and just how they would pull off their big day, Aniston and Theroux exchanged vows in an intimate sunset ceremony on Aug. 5 at their Bel Air home. The whole thing was so “sneakily planned,” as the source puts it, that even some of their 75 guests—a starry roster that included maid of honor Courteney Cox, Sandra Bullock, Jimmy Kimmel, Chelsea Handler and Ellen DeGeneres—were caught off guard. “Only her closest confidantes knew it was a wedding,” says the source. “Guests

Valets in blue vests greeted guests as they arrived at the wedding around 4:30 p.m. While some were dressed formally, others were more casual because they “were told it was a birthday party for Justin,” says a source. “Jen and Justin wanted to surprise guests, and guests were certainly surprised.” A source says Aniston’s parents didn’t attend. Instead, the couple’s closest friends were welcomed into a dazzling backyard affair that featured a mix of boho-chic and modern style, with jewel-toned flowers and hundreds of candles setting the romantic scene. Stunning in a “simple but beautiful” cream-colored gown that was “strapless, elegant and flowy,” the bride, 46, “was glowing, and they were both extremely happy,” one attendee says of the ceremony. The couple didn’t shed any tears, just shared joyful smiles as they exchanged wedding bands designed by their close friend Jennifer Meyer. Guests feasted on fettuccine carbonara and chicken and fish and enjoyed wine from John & Pete’s Fine Wine & Spirits in L.A. The rollicking festivities carried on late into the night to an eclectic playlist featuring everything from Michael Jackson’s “Billie Jean” to Sir Mix-A-Lot’s “Baby Got Back” to Sia herself performing her hit “Chandelier.” “The party went until 3 a.m.,” adds the attendee, “and everyone was dancing. Courtney was the last one to leave!”

For those who know them best, the magical night reflected everything the couple cherish: friends, home, their dogs and each other. For a while, “they couldn’t decide what kind of wedding they wanted to have,” says another

When she realized that with help, she could pull off a wedding there, she was very excited about it.”

The wedding marked the happiest of endings for the Friends icon and the actor-screenwriter, who first met on the Hawaii set of 2008’s Tropic Thunder and began dating in 2011. Although the “When will they wed?” chorus had grown so loud that both Aniston and Theroux joked about it—“We have hot feet!” Theroux responded to a question about cold feet—privately, the pair were in no hurry. “The timing was finally right,” says an industry source who knows them both. For Aniston, who has called her new husband “a protector” and “just a good human being,” the connection with Theroux was unlike anything she’d ever experienced. “From the beginning, this was a different relationship for Jen,” says an Aniston friend. “They were just so comfortable together and became inseparable pretty quickly.” At the same time, “Jen was never in a rush to get married, because they were just so content,” adds the friend. “But marriage was always the plan.”

Aniston herself told People in June that her history with Theroux provided a solid relationship foundation—even if she didn’t foresee a romance at first. When they met, Aniston was single following her 2005 divorce from Brad Pitt and Theroux was in a long-term relationship with costume designer Heidi

Bivens. “We knew each other for so long before we were a couple,” Aniston said. “It’s funny to replay [when I met him] because we weren’t even anywhere in each other’s realms of possibility.”

Friends say that in the driven but fun-loving Theroux, who wrote the upcoming Zoolander 2 and currently stars on HBO’s The Leftovers, Aniston found her perfect match. “Justin can be goofy and silly—she loves that about him,” says the Aniston pal. “They’re in sync.” At the same time, “they have different personalities,” says the source

6. Turning heads on the red carpet, Aniston and Theroux attended the American Cinematheque Award Gala honoring pal Ben Stiller in L.A. in November 2012.

8. Cabo San Lucas, Mexico, is a favorite vacation spot for the two (smooching in August 2013).

close to the actress. “Justin brings a very laid-back element to their relationship. He loves playing pranks and makes their relationship fun. He also is Jen’s rock. He calms her down. And Jen is very attentive and nurturing.”

From the start the couple had “wow-like chemistry,” as one industry insider puts it (see also: any sizzling photo from one of their many tropical getaways). But they took a slow-but-steady approach to their relationship as they worked through their significant differences. Initially, “it wasn’t easy for them to figure out ways to merge their lives,” says the Aniston source. While Theroux, who was raised in Washington, D.C., was reluctant to abandon his downtown Manhattan home base, New Yorker-turned-dedicated-Californian Aniston “tried to live in New York City” early in the relationship, “but realized that she prefers L.A.,” says the source. The busy stars’ many film and television projects often mean weeks apart at a stretch. But the long-distance separations ultimately work for them. “They seem to thrive on being apart and doing their own thing,” says an entertainment source. "Each needs to be free to pursue their own interests."

When they're both home at their 8,500-sq.-ft. Bel Air mansion ("It's spectacular," says a source who has visited), the twosome throw weekly dinner parties for a small group of close friends, watch movies and care for their growing menagerie—including 17 chickens. "My life feels perfect for me," Aniston told People in June, adding that she has learned to "appreciate what's happening, whether it's waking up and seeing your dog being adorable or a sunset that stops you in your tracks." When asked to name the best thing to happen in her 40s, she didn't hesitate: "Justin is the best thing this decade."

When it came to planning their big day, the pair made sure to showcase their shared sense of humor—which skews toward "a joyous cynicism about life and everything else," as the entertainment source describes it. Lending an especially cheeky touch: two playful puppets resting atop the strawberry-and-vanilla wedding cake created by Food Network star Duff Goldman of Charm City Cakes in L.A. In 2011 Aniston told People about her love for the Muppets when asked about rumors that she'd secretly adopted a baby. "Not adopting. There's no nursery. Those are the two smallest things that exist," she said of a pair of puppets in her living room. "They've come with me on vacations," she added. silly. They’ve been to Cabo so far.”

Chances are they’ve now been even farther afield. Less than 24 hours after exchanging their vows, the newlyweds boarded a private jet bound for Bora Bora in French Polynesia. It’s the same trip they made a year ago for Theroux’s birthday, which also marks the anniversary of their 2012 engagement. “It’s funny how they planned the whole wedding around their honeymoon,” says the Aniston source. In choosing Aug. 5, they had almost two weeks to enjoy the getaway before Aniston returns to promote her new comedy She’s Funny That Way, out Aug. 21, and begins shooting the Garry Marshall ensemble Mother’s Day in Atlanta around the end of the month. Boarding a Gulfstream jet on Aug. 6, “they were greeted with Champagne,” says an observer. “They didn’t stop smiling.”

Known to jet off with pals on luxurious vacations, they brought along their own honeymoon crew, including Cox, her 11-year-old daughter Coco and Jason Bateman and his family. “They want the celebration to last as long as possible,” says the Aniston source.

Now, as they begin their married life together, the fun has only just begun. “You can feel their connection across the room,” a friend says of both. “They don’t hold back on anything; with their lives,

INSIDE THE REALITY STAR'S SEXY TRANSFORMATION

Kardashian shows off her slim physique in a curve-hugging dress in May.

Khloé Kardashian's fitness kick has been paying off! The reality star, who often shares photos of her intense workouts on Instagram (see sidebar), revealed to Australian radio station NOVA FM that she's dropped 35 lbs.—and it didn't come without hard work. The 31-year-old—who has said the gym was her “refuge” following her 2013 split from husband Lamar Odom—recently told People that she works out “almost every day,” including five sessions per week with celebrity trainer Gunnar Peterson. “Khloé is in love with fitness. She never cancels,” says Peterson, who incorporates interval training and strength moves into their workouts. She's also a fan of spinning studios SoulCycle and Cycle House, where, according to an onlooker, she “gets intense—but still has fun with it.” When it comes to diet, Kardashian practices portion control, stays away from soda and tries to drink at least five liters of water a day. As she told Complex for her August/September cover shoot, “I've never felt as comfortable in my own skin.”

Cover Girl

Kardashian stunned in the latest issues of Women's Health and Complex magazines with her postdivorce “revenge body.” What motivated her to stick with her workouts? “All my critics who called me ‘the fat one’ for my entire existence,” she told Women's Health.

Khloé Dropped 35 lbs.

She challenges herself

"I work out five days a week," she tweeted in response to lipo rumors. "I bust my ass!"

She wears a waist trainer... to the gym!

"Morning sweat and waist snatching session," she wrote of the modern-day corset.

She spins her heart out

Life's stressful for this indoor cycling fan, but "I don't feel any of that craziness after my ride."

She stays motivated by family

Flexing with her sister Kourtney, 36: "We had a buddy system thing going on!"

Khloé's GYMSTAGRAMS!

"I would rather work out harder and eat what I want, in moderation," said Kardashian in the September issue of Women's Health. See how the Keeping Up with the Kardashians star lifts, squats and spars her way to svelte.

She enlists celeb trainer Gunnar Peterson

"I was in one of those moods," she captioned her calorie-torching boxing session.

She fits in workouts while traveling

"Even down unda and jet lagged, we will find a fitness class," she wrote from Australia.

She lifts heavy weights

She's not afraid to pump some serious iron! Here she does a 50-lb. squat like a pro.

She sticks with her regimen

FASHION MOGUL, INVESTOR, TV PERSONALITY

Daymond John

DAYMOND JOHN DIDN'T HAVE a lot of positive role models when he was growing up in Hollis, Queens: "A lot of kids looked up to drug dealers because we didn't have any other images," says John, 46. But thanks to a strong work ethic, he rose above, building a multimillion-dollar empire with the hip-hop clothing line FUBU. "If I can do it," says John, who appears on TV's Shark Tank, "anyone else can too."

A Childhood of Transition

John's earliest childhood memories are happy ones: "All the kids played stickball and hopscotch in the streets," he says. But by the time he was 12, his father, a computer programmer, and mother, who sold handmade goods at the local flea market, had split up, and his entire community was in a crisis. "When [the crack cocaine epidemic] hit," says John, "it changed the neighborhood." Many of his friends were pulled into drugs and crime, but "I had a great relationship with my mom," he says. "I couldn't let her down."

A Born Entrepreneur

"My first business was selling painted pencils to boys to give to girls when I was 6," he says. Forgoing college, he worked odd jobs, from messenger to waiter, before launching a line of handmade hats in 1989 under the name FUBU. "For Us By Us came to me after hearing how some brands didn't want to make clothes for African-Americans."

Growing His Brand

Spurred by the popularity of hip-hop, FUBU took off faster than John ever expected, and he expanded to shirts and other apparel. "I became known as this big clothing company," he says. "But I was just a waiter at Red Lobster with 10 shirts." Drowning in orders, he teamed up with Samsung and soon opened FUBU's first real offices in the Empire State Building in 1997. "I sat there every night for the first six months looking out over the city, thinking, 'I can't believe I'm up here!'"

Paying It Forward

Now, as CEO of the FUBU corporation and an investor on ABC's hit shows Shark Tank and Beyond the Tank, the father of two is setting an example for the next generation of dreamers. "I get excited about their businesses," says John, who tells young mentees to follow their passion. "They've allowed me to invest in their dream—I don't want to let them down."

Quarantined for 66 Weeks

GLENN AND CARA O'NEILL HAVE TAKEN DRASTIC STEPS TO SAVE THEIR DAUGHTER FROM A RARE AND DEADLY DISEASE BY CAITLIN KEATING

At Glenn and Cara O'Neill's home in Columbia, S.C., visitors are a rarity. When someone does come over, they must put on a mask and gloves before entering. A handmade sign on the kitchen wall records the number of days the family has lived under self-imposed quarantine. "It's life or death," says Cara, 40, who quit her job as a pediatrician for the quarantine. The O'Neills are taking these extraordinary measures to try to save the life of their daughter, Eliza. The 5-year-old has Sanfilippo syndrome—an extremely rare, degenerative, genetic disorder that primarily affects the brain. "Eventually children become wheelchair bound and lose interaction with those around them, much like a person with dementia," says Dr. Kim McBride, a geneticist at Nationwide Children's Hospital in Columbus, Ohio. "Most die by the time they are teens,"

'Our life is now about saving Eliza. We can't just sit back and wait for her to die'
—GLENN O'NEILL

The family's only hope is centered around getting Eliza into a clinical trial for a promising gene therapy McBride is helping to run. And that's where the quarantine comes in: They need to keep her both from getting sicker and also from developing antibodies that could eliminate her from the study. "We are not going to risk that," says Glenn, 42, who works from home as a consultant at Symantec.

The O'Neills have raised $2.5 million through the Cure Sanfilippo Foundation (curesff.org) to help fund the trial. And while they wait to hear if Eliza can be part of it, they are doing their best to make the quarantine fun. They play dress up, have dance parties and take occasional trips to isolated areas like state parks so Eliza and her brother Beckham, 8, can run around.

Meanwhile the clock is ticking. If the disease progresses as it normally does, their fun-loving little girl might not be able to walk, talk or eat by next year. "It's absolutely devastating," says Glenn. "We are on a roller coaster that is slanted downwards." ●

THE TRAILBLAZER

"The beauty of getting older is you care less about hiding your struggles," says Johnson (on Aug. 2 and, below, in '74).

Too fat." That's how Eileen Ford dismissed the 5'9", 125-lb. Beverly Johnson when she walked into the legendary modeling agency back in 1971. Three days later, Ford summoned the 19-year-old beauty back and declared, "You've lost weight!" (Johnson hadn't lost a pound. In fact, she'd downed a few strawberry shortcake Good Humor bars.) "That's when I realized what was ahead—a lot of smoke and mirrors," Johnson tells People. "But I didn't let it deter me."

Ford signed Johnson, predicting she would have a typical modeling career of five to six years in front of the camera. Now, after more than four decades, 500 magazine covers—including her historic 1974 cover of American

Vogue, a first for a black woman—and her own reality TV show, Johnson, at 63, is having the last word. In a new memoir, The Face That Changed It All, Johnson bares the scars beneath her glamorous exterior: molestation by a neighbor that started her drinking at age 12, cocaine addiction, a near-fatal overdose, an abusive second husband and financial ruin. “You cry and you laugh, but it’s my life and I hope it can inspire,” says Johnson, who is now back in the spotlight thanks to the Bill Cosby scandal. “Pissed off” late last year when the women accusing Cosby of rape were called liars, Johnson bolstered their stories with her own, saying the comic drugged her in 1986. “I didn’t plan on that being part of my legacy,” she says. “It was ugly and horrific and intolerable.”

The daughter of a steelworker and a nurse, Johnson grew up in Buffalo, N.Y., the middle of five children. When she learned she could make 75 dollars an hour as a young model (“My Dad made 75 a week,” she marvels), Johnson was determined “to be the best.” She wanted nothing less than a Vogue cover, she told Ford, who replied, “You’re never going to get it.” So Johnson hired a new agent and landed it within a year. “It changed my life,” she says. The fame that came with that cover impressed upon her “a

But it also ushered in a blur of A-list partying with the likes of Elizabeth Taylor and Halston; one three-day bender with the “cool kids” at Studio 54; famous boyfriends (see box); dates with Eddie Murphy and Jack Nicholson; an invitation from Warren Beatty to spend the night (she turned him down) and two short-lived marriages. It got to the point where, she says, “I lost touch with reality.”

To stay a size zero, Johnson, then 103 lbs., “ate nothing, just black coffee, and a sip of broth if things got tough,” and a flute of champagne at night, she says. “We didn’t even drink water. We thought it was fattening.” She subsisted on cocaine—a gram a day. “All of the things you needed to be a high-class

Arthur Ashe, whom she dated in 1975:

The tennis star “was pretty squeaky-clean . . . which wasn’t my cup of tea. But I found myself falling madly in love. We had all-night lovemaking sessions . . . swinging from the chandelier.”

Chris Noth, her boyfriend from 1990-95: “The night we met he came up to me from behind and put his arms around my waist. There was something so reassuring about that gesture. I could see big potential in Mr. Big.”

Mike Tyson: “Mike was almost 15 years my junior and a pure blast. But I wasn’t exactly broadcasting our romantic involvement. There was nothing cute, sexy or attractive about being a cougar in 1986.”

Michael Jackson, her pal: “Michael would routinely dial me up for skin-care tips because he struggled with horrible acne during his teen years. . . .”

Information:

Class action settlements have been reached involving Cathode Ray Tubes ("CRTs"), a display device that was sold by itself or as the main component in TVs and computer monitors. The lawsuit claims that the Defendants fixed the prices of CRTs causing consumers to pay more for CRTs and products containing CRTs, such as TVs and computer monitors (collectively "CRT Products"). The Defendants deny Plaintiffs' allegations.

Who is included in the Settlements?

Individuals and businesses that:

- Purchased a CRT or a product containing a CRT, such as a TV or computer monitor, in the United States (except Illinois, Washington and Oregon) between March 1, 1995, and November 25, 2007;
- For their own use and not for resale.

Purchases made directly from a defendant or alleged co-conspirator are not included (see the list of defendants and alleged co-conspirators at www.CRTclaims.com or by calling 1-800-649-0963).

What do the Settlements provide?

There are seven new Settlements totaling $541.75 million. Together with the two previously-approved settlements, the Settlement Fund is $576.75 million. Only individuals and businesses who purchased CRT Products in AZ, CA, FL, HI, IA, KS, ME, MI, MN, MS, NE, NV, NM, NY, NC, ND, SD, TN, VT, WV, WI, or the District of Columbia, are eligible to file a claim for money. HI, NE and NV have shorter claims periods. The purchase must have been made in one of the foregoing states, but you do not have to be a resident of one of these states. The Settlements release the injunctive relief claims of purchasers of CRT Products nationwide.

The amount of money you will receive depends on the type and quantity of CRT Products you purchased and the total number of claims made. Eligible individuals and businesses are expected to get a minimum payment of $25. Large purchasers could recover many thousands of dollars.

How can I get a payment?

Claim online or by mail by December 7, 2015. The simple online Claim Form only takes 3-5 minutes for most individuals.

What are my rights?

If you do nothing you will be bound by the Court's decisions. If you want to keep your right to sue the Defendants, you must exclude yourself from the Settlement Class by October 8, 2015. If you stay in the Settlement Class, you may object to the Settlements by October 8, 2015.

The Court will hold a hearing on November 13, 2015 at 10:00 a.m. to consider whether to approve the Settlements and a request for attorneys' fees plus reimbursement of litigation expenses and awards to Class Representatives. The total attorney fee request for all Plaintiffs' counsel shall not exceed one-third of the $576.75 million Settlement Fund. The hearing date may change so please check the website. You or your own lawyer may appear and speak at the hearing at your own expense.

model, high cheekbones, bright eyes, that was all provided by the drugs. It was encouraged. It was one of the perks. It killed your appetite, gave you focus, and it was glamorous and expensive. But it was all a delusion." In 1981 she almost overdosed. "You think, 'just let me lie down,' and that's when you die," she recalls. Instead, a boyfriend threw her in a cold shower "shoes and all, made me drink a whole carton of milk, and I stabilized."

Johnson soon hit her lowest point: broke and battling her second husband, music producer Danny Sims, for custody of their toddler daughter Anansa. Wanting more for her child than a drugged out—or dead—mother, Johnson entered a 12-step program and got clean. "I didn't want to numb myself anymore," says Johnson. "Whatever I had to face, I had to be present."

She moved to Southern California, and devoted herself to healthy living: playing golf, building a lifestyle brand (including mineral makeup and hair extensions) and bonding with her daughter, who now has three kids of her own. "Sometimes she's an example of what not to do," admits Anansa, 36, a plus-size model. "But I admire her for what she's overcome. She's my hero."

It was Anansa who convinced her mom to "do the right thing" and speak up for Cosby's other alleged victims. And now that she has, Johnson values her voice more than her famous face. "I'm proud I came forward," she says. "Like the Vogue cover, that will forever be a part of who I am." ●

CLAIRE DANES | HOMELAND

After four seasons playing a mentally unstable CIA agent on Showtime's Homeland, "psychologically, I've taken a beating—physically too," says Danes, who just received her fourth nomination for the part. "But it's just so wonderful to play a character who is not necessarily defined by her sex." It's a welcome change for Danes, 36. "I had spent a long time playing girlfriends before this," she says. Off-camera she felt similar injustices. "I feel like my body is monitored and commented on infinitely more than my male counterparts," she says. When she was pregnant with her son Cyrus, now 2, with husband Hugh Dancy, "I was mindful of what I was eating because I didn't want to look pregnant. I think I was very anxious because I was responsible for this huge show, but I had this other major project of growing a person." Since then it's been all about finding balance, with Cyrus a fixture on Mom's international sets. Says Danes: "He's a Homeland baby through and through. Little tiny Cyrus in the ops room, saving the world from Armageddon! He loves it."

JULIA LOUIS-DREYFUS | VEEP

There's the staggering number of Emmy nominations—16 for acting, including this year's for HBO's Veep, shattering a record previously held by Lucille Ball. Then there's the fact that she's the only woman to ever win three Emmys for three different comedy series. But for all the achievements, Louis-Dreyfus, 54, isn't about to start settling down. “There is a very ageist and sexist culture in show business,” she says. “There have been numerous occasions in my career where I've had to push harder because I'm a woman. My point of view wasn't taken seriously enough.” Now Louis-Dreyfus, who poked fun at Hollywood standards in a riotous Amy Schumer sketch (Google their names and “LFD”), is feeling more comfortable in her skin than ever, though she admits she “feels the pressure” to look youthful. “I certainly have my share of vanity,” says the mom of two. “But on the other hand, I'm not pulling my face back behind my ears. I'm glad to be the age I am and to have the career I've had. It's like, ‘Yeah, I'm here, I'm still doing this, and my plan is to continue for quite some time.’”

VIOLA DAVIS

HOW TO GET AWAY WITH MURDER

Bedtime stories at Davis's house always star the same heroine: her daughter Genesis, 4. "She says, 'Make the princess me. Let it be me,'" says the actress. "That's what happens when you're young. Then something happens where you realize, 'They don't see me that way.'" But the two-time Academy Award nominee, 50, refuses to let go of that childlike desire. "I want to be in the story," she says. "I think I deserve to be in that story, and I believe my story deserves to be told." And now, as an embattled law professor on ABC's How to Get Away with Murder, the first-time Emmy nominee feels she's been given a role that's a "stepping-stone in taking people out of their comfort zone" of how they see black women. "She's not a cartoon cutout," she says of the "hypersexual antiheroine" character. "She's a mess and she's nothing that someone who looks like me has played before. I think, win or lose [at the Emmys], that's a step in the right direction."

JULIE BOWEN

MODERN FAMILY

When Bowen auditioned for the role of Claire on the ABC sitcom Modern Family, she had but one thought: “They’re staring at my giant belly.”

Convinced that being pregnant with twins would keep her from landing the role, Bowen, 46, says she went home “and cried and cried.” Flash forward six years (and two Emmy wins for Supporting Actress in a Comedy), and Bowen finds her appearance crosses her mind far less now that life outside of work is lived in “survival mode” raising a house full of boys (Oliver, 8, and Gus and John, 6, with husband Scott Phillips, 42, a real estate investor). “If we’re going to the park I’m going to be mud-splattered, so I’m not thinking about how I’m going to have to physically present myself,” she says. Professionally the actress is looking forward to jobs that require less time in the hair-and-makeup trailer. “I’m more interested in the stuff going on behind the camera,” she says. “I love Modern Family, but the reality is, it is a very safe place. I think to get that feeling of pride back, I need to feel a little unsafe again.”

EMPIRE

Growing up in Washington, D.C., Taraji P. Henson says it was “rare” to turn on the TV and “see a woman that looked like me—that inspired me and showed me how to be powerful.” So when she was cast as the formidable matriarch Cookie Lyon on Empire, she felt an added pressure to, as she says, “not [screw] it up.” Henson’s hit Fox show can tend toward the melodramatic, but the Academy Award nominee, 44, says she has been intentionally “delicate” in developing the character of Cookie. “She can be really bigger than life, so I took very good care [to make] her someone that people could identify with,” says the second-time Emmy nominee. “It was important that I gave her dimensions and made her a real person, not just a caricature who could be sassy and roll her neck.” As for the real-life women Henson looked to for inspiration, she says she didn’t have to look far: “the women in my family.” Photographed in Los Angeles on Aug. 7

TATIANA MASLANY

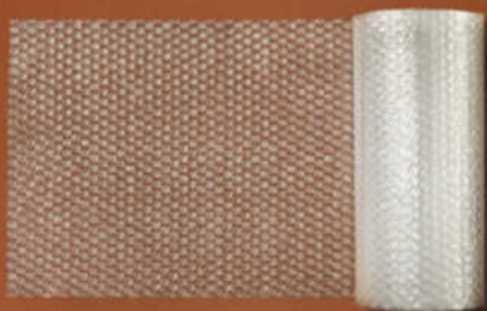

ORPHAN BLACK

Playing not one but more than 10 leading ladies on BBC America's cult clone drama Orphan Black, Tatiana Maslany has been blonde and brunette, punk rock and preppy. But off-camera, she's not even remotely interested in conforming to Hollywood's beauty standards. "I've been asked to shave my armpits, wax my mustache—which I refused to do!" says the Canadian-born actress and first-time nominee, 29. For women in the industry, "there's a power struggle for sure." But Maslany remains resolute: "Botox and all that stuff is not interesting to me. Gena Rowlands is the reason I am an actor. She's 80-something and she's still acting." Now, with more and more series showcasing strong female characters, "I feel very lucky to be part of TV right now, but I hope that at some point that is just the default," she says. "Strong women' should just be part of the fabric of the storytelling." Photographed in London on Aug. 3

SCOTT PORTER Meet My 'Little Buddy'

After their 2013 wedding, Scott Porter and his wife, Kelsey, planned on waiting a few years before starting their family. Then Kelsey was diagnosed with the neurodegenerative genetic disorder Huntington's disease. "She was brave and said, 'I want to have kids right away so I have as much time with them as possible before Huntington's takes effect,'" the former Heart of Dixie star, 36, says of his wife, 30, who underwent IVF and had their viable embryos genetically tested to ensure their son would not be a carrier. "What is a 10-month process for many people was a 16-month process for us," says Porter. Now, just 11 weeks after the "highly anticipated" arrival of McCoy, whose name was inspired by NFL quarterback (and Kelsey's fellow University of Texas alum) Colt McCoy, Porter says the milestones are coming fast—and early. "He rolled over at 3 weeks," Kelsey says of her son, who already weighs 14.5 lbs. "I was like, 'I'm supposed to be able to put you down and you're not supposed to move!'" Adds Porter: "He's a strong little guy. He's my little buddy." —PATRICK GOMEZ

LUPITA NYONG'O'S SUNGLASSES

Brow bars (that's sunglass lingo for the metal piece across the top of the frame) and mirrored lenses were all the rage, but it wasn't until the actress stepped out in Dior's "So Real" pair that we had to get in on the look. Sold!

MODEL OF THE MOMENT GIGI HADID

If summer 2015 had an official hashtag, it would be #AllGigiEverything. The 20-year-old stunner stole the spotlight on every red carpet, landed a slew of major fashion campaigns and even scored a spot in Taylor Swift's girl squad.

SANDRA BULLOCK'S MINIONS SHOES

We didn't think it was possible to out-cute the film's adorable henchmen, but then the actress (who voiced the movie's villain) teamed up with designer Rupert Sanderson to create 10 pairs of heels inspired by the little yellow guys. Each went up for auction—raising a total of $84,850 to fund art programs for kids in L.A.

EMMA STONE'S BOLD EYELINER

Amid a sea of stars who tried the blue eyeliner trend, Stone stood out for this vibrant, V-shaped wing. To keep the look clean and modern, makeup artist Rachel Goodwin applied the aqua-marine shade only to the outer corners of her upper and lower lids.

THE 'IT' DRESS OF SUMMER

The best-dressed ladies at every BBQ were likely wearing some version of a breezy midi. Yet none was more popular among celebs than Reformation's "Mariana" dress ($198), and we can see why: The longer A-line skirt balances the off-the-shoulder neckline (a huge trend this season), and who doesn't love pockets?

STARS WITH CRAZY HAIR COLORS

Forget blondes; *mom*s have more fun. A rainbow of hues kept popping up on unexpected celebs. See: Ripa's "superhero" blue, Duff's "mermaid" moment and McCarthy's "hot bitch pink." (Her words, not ours!)

STANDOUT LIPSTICK SHADES

When we spotted these two ladies wearing such vibrant lip colors on the red carpet, we were inspired to ditch our basic nude glosses in favor of something way more eye-catching.

Kate Bosworth's pro Hung Vanngo opted for a creamy tangerine to complete her glowy look, while pro Kayleen McAdams layered a purple gloss over a magenta lipstick to create a custom pout for Rachel McAdams.

THE HOTTEST ACCESSORY WE NEVER SAW COMING

Stars flocked to Instagram (pun intended!) to show off not just their beach bods but also their trendy pool toys. The swan and flamingo floats were so in demand, people were paying quadruple the price on eBay.

GABRIELLE UNION'S DENIM OUTFIT

The denim-on-denim trend isn't going anywhere, so take notes on how to rock it from the master. The actress tucked a loose top (hers is Rails) into a high-waisted pencil skirt and accessorized with crisp white Converse sneakers and a structured purse to add a bit of polish to the otherwise casual vibe. And yes, that's a jean jacket she's carrying. Talk about some next-level street style!

BRAIDS EVERY WAY

Ponytails, crowns, faux hawks, fishtails—there were so many gorgeous takes on plaits, where do we even begin? Sienna Miller gave us '90s flashbacks (in a good way) with sweet twists at Cannes. And Janelle Monáe blew up the Internet with her creative use of jewelry at the CFDA Fashion Awards. (Those are rings woven into her updo!) Even Taraji P. Henson's peekaboo cornrows, as tiny as they were, made a huge impact.

Last song I sang out loud

I'm just learning how to play "Wild Horses" on the ukulele. My husband [Kevin Bacon] gave me one for my birthday last August. I've never played an instrument before, so it's pretty monumental.

Last book I read

I read The Imperfectionists, by Tom Rachman. I wrote this guy a fan letter and he actually wrote me back, if you can believe it. I fully didn't expect it. I was a little starstruck!

Last time I was embarrassed

I was introduced to Kristen Wiig, whom I had never met, and I had taken two Benadryl, and I almost called her Tina Fey. That was pretty horrifying. I realized as I was saying it, and my husband realized it at the same moment, and he goes, "No, no, no!"

Last obsession

I'm always obsessed with chocolate, and I found a new brand that I love called Lake Champlain. There are pieces of peppermint in it. It's like heaven. A day without chocolate is like a day without sunshine.

Last thing I returned

A pair of clogs. In theory I thought, "I could rock these clogs," and then I was like, "I can't rock these clogs."
